of this volume, his most significant essays are translated to present young Castoriadis' philosophical interpretations, while the second part highlights aspects of his essays on the portrayal of the body in African art, film, literature, photography and theatre. The book includes thematically linked contributions which explore issues of number of critical perspectives it can serve. However, by and large, African representations of the body have been overlooked. This coherent volume brings together different African historical, cultural and geographic perspectives, focusing on the diversity of cultural and geographic expressions. The book also explores the relationship between the body, identity and politics.
